

August Spies Auto-Biography: His Speech in Court, and General Notes (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from August Spies Auto-Biography: His Speech in Court, and General Notes P. S. Since the publication of this little book was begun, and before its completion was reached, an incident occurred which, because of the sensational character given it by a degenerated public press, needs a few words of explanation. My sympathy with the persecuted and lawlessly adjudicated prisoners soon changed into a feeling of amity for Mr. Spies when I became personally acquainted with him. And from this feeling of friendship gradually developed a strong affection.....As a mere friend, many obstacles were put in my way when visiting the jail. To enjoy the privileges of a relative, to which our mutual affection entitled me, we became affianced. But I was informed that only wives were allowed the privilege of seeing their husbands outside of the regular visiting days; and it was also intimated that under the new jail regulations I would not be permitted to visit the prisoners any more at all. It was clear to me that my efforts in behalf of the prisoners, in behalf of justice, were disagreeable to a certain class interested in their extermination - a feeling only intensified by my social standing and connections. It was clear to me that they sought to exclude me from all communication with the prisoners and my affianced. Upon this discovery, we decided to become husband and wife by law. As my parents were favorable to our union, it was an affair that concerned no more nor less than two (2) persons. But a mob of newspaper men, respectable rouses many of them, howled and raved when our proposed marriage became known. Had I committed every crime denominated in our criminal code, these chivalrous, gallant American gentlemen could not have villified and denounced me more than they did. Had I been some obscure, foreign girl not a word would have been said in condemnation of the marriage. But an American girl from respectable ancestry and standing following the voice of her heart - which course alone, I hold to be moral - instead of the sound of dollars! That's unprecedented, scandalous - the girl must be silly! must have read trash novels! Had I married an old, invalid debauchee, with great riches, those moral gentlemen who assail me now would have lauded me to the skies, and many of my Christian sisters and brethren would have said to their sons and daughters: Very commendable! A very sensible girl! and those who knew me personally - I have always thought her so sweet! I prefer the censure of these moral people - who, it seems, cannot comprehend a love made doubly strong by a similarity of mental tastes and pursuits, as ours is - to their approval. I am equally proud of the friends that I have made - persons who can understand a pure and unselfish love.
