

Considerations Upon the State of Public Affairs, Vol. 1: At the Beginning of the Year MDCCXCVIII; France (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Considerations Upon the State of Public Affairs, Vol. 1: At the Beginning of the Year MDCCXCVIII; France It is now two years since I attempted to disentangle the war from that labyrinth of fanaticism and folly, in which its causes and its objects were lost or confounded, and to bring back the minds of men to the plain trodden path of common sense and experience. It appeared desirable at that time to separate the causes of the war from the doctrines of the French revolution, and the objects of it from the establishment of any particular form of government in France.
